18 - Recommended Periodicals

American Jails Magazine

Since its introduction to the corrections community in 1987, American Jails Magazine has had the distinction of being the only national magazine focused solely on the day-to-day management and operations of local detention facilities. Although American Jails Magazine principally covers jail issues in the United States, on occasion articles are published that look at jail, prison and law enforcement operations in other countries. So in a sense American Jails is also a prison magazine and a law enforcement magazine for everyone in the law enforcement industry. Published bimonthly, American Jails Magazine reaches government personnel at the local, State, and Federal levels, as well as individuals in the private sector.

For more information about article submissions or guest editorials, contact Rick Neimiller at (301) 790-3930, ext. 13, or rickn@aja.org.

Corrections Today

Corrections Today is the professional membership publication of the American Correctional Association (ACA). Its international readership includes individuals involved in every sector of the corrections and criminal justice fields. The magazine is published six times a year.
